2017 marked many milestones for Every Mother Counts. The community-based programs we fund in 7 countries around the world are meeting women and families where they are each and every day to ensure safe and positive birth experiences. It is a privilege to support them by providing supplies, expertise, visibility and capacity building.

The year also brought a number of natural disasters and humanitarian crises which took a huge toll on women and their families here in the U.S. and abroad. We were able to spring into action through grants from our Maternal & Child Emergency Fund - in Bangladesh, Nepal, Puerto Rico, St. Croix, Texas and Florida.

Since our first film, No Woman, No Cry, we have been utilizing storytelling to share the challenges and solutions in global maternal health and highlighting the women behind the statistics to inspire action. This year, we began laying the groundwork to expand the organization’s advocacy and policy work, engaging new partners, offering allies additional ways to make a difference, and bringing more voices to the table. This is a critical time for these voices to be heard and to create lasting change.

I am excited to share with you the impact that we created together in 2017! Thank you for the critical role you have played in our success.

— Christy Turlington Burns
Too many mothers and mothers-to-be do not have access to essential and equitable care.

Each day, more than 800 women do not survive pregnancy or childbirth.

Up to 98% of these deaths are preventable.

Together, we can change this.

“Women are the key to successful development and ongoing progress. In the workforce, their ingenuity, determination, and hard work help our economies thrive. In the government, they offer valuable perspective that can inform policy and remove barriers.”

— DR. TEDROS ADHANOM GHEBREYESUS, DIRECTOR-GENERAL OF THE WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION

Every Mother Counts (EMC) is a non-profit organization dedicated to making pregnancy and childbirth safer for every mother, everywhere.

We believe that quality, respectful and equitable resources should be accessible to all mothers. By supporting women, we can improve the health and well-being of their families, communities and societies.
$14.2 million invested in public education, community engagement and grants.

We invest in the health of women and mothers. In 2017, we invested $1.2 million into community-based health initiatives.

Each year, approximately 300,000 women and girls around the world do not survive pregnancy and childbirth. Every Mother Counts supports programs in places with some of the highest rates of preventable maternal deaths and disabilities, to ensure that every woman and girl has access to basic and lifesaving care.

The grantee partner organizations Every Mother Counts supports around the world are rooted in their local communities and are dedicated to improving access to critical and quality maternity care. Our grantees partners serve marginalized populations who often face discrimination and lack access to culturally-appropriate health services and resources.

Our grantmaking embodies a trust-and-partnership-based approach that focuses on expanding and strengthening the maternity provider workforce, advancing effective models of care, and implementing proven, locally-based solutions. Before investing in these organizations, we cultivate relationships with each of them to gain an in-depth understanding of their approaches. During the course of the partnership, we work closely with each partner and its leadership to understand what they need to build their capacity to become a stronger and more sustainable organization.
HOPE Foundation for Women & Children of Bangladesh works to improve the health of people living in low-income rural areas in Bangladesh, particularly women and children. Through comprehensive community health services provided by HOPE’s hospital and health outposts, health worker training, and community outreach and education, HOPE delivers a high standard of care.

Our grant funding supports HOPE Foundation to provide women with complete pregnancy and safe delivery care, as well as postnatal and newborn care, including immunizations, health screenings, breastfeeding support and family planning.

PARTNER Since 2015
2017 GRANT SUPPORT $150,000 | 2017-2018

In Bangladesh, more than 7,600 women die every year from pregnancy-related causes largely due to a shortage of trained healthcare workers in rural areas.

Humaira Begum is expecting her third child. In her village, located miles from a properly-equipped clinic, many women give birth at home.

HOPE covers comprehensive maternity care for Humaira. Her delivery plan includes financial preparation and travel arrangements. If she faces any complications, HOPE will help her reach the hospital. With HOPE’s assistance, Humaira can benefit from a safe delivery and quality antenatal care.

Only 36% of Bangladeshi women receive postnatal care from a trained provider within two days of delivery.
Indigenous Mayan women are twice as likely to die from pregnancy and childbirth related complications than non-Indigenous women.

Asociación de las Comadronas del Area Mam (ACAM) offers both women’s and community healthcare and transportation, and leads continuing education clinics for local midwives and health workers.

Our grant funding supports ACAM’s work to provide reproductive, maternal and newborn health care through their birth center and mobile clinics, as well as technical assistance and training for the comadronas.

Asociación Corazón del Agua trains Indigenous midwives in Guatemala’s first professional university-level degree program. The school recruits its students from high maternal-mortality regions and incorporates Indigenous traditions around pregnancy and birth.

Our grant funding supports the training and housing of the midwifery students and renovation of Corazón’s birth center and clinic, which provides care for women on a sliding scale, subsidizes the cost of the school, and serves as a training ground for students.

Founded by director and midwife, Gabriela Meléndez Peláez, Asociación Corazón del Agua is the country’s first professional university degree program that incorporates Indigenous traditions. Midwives like Gabriela and Gloria drastically improve maternal health outcomes while providing culturally-relevant care in local languages.
The United Nations has classified Haiti as one of nine countries worldwide facing a severe midwifery workforce shortage. Mothers in hard-to-reach places like Mount Michele and Woch Milat in Cabestor have traditionally lacked access to skilled maternity care.

Midwives for Haiti offers a rigorous 12-month training program for Haitian nurses to become skilled birth attendants.

Our grant funding supports Midwives for Haiti’s program that trains skilled birth attendants, operates a birth center and provides emergency transport in rural Haiti. 2017 marked the fourth class of Midwives for Haiti students trained with support from EMC.

The Foundation for the Advancement of Haitian Midwives (FAHM) works to improve maternal health through a model that promotes leadership, networking, empowerment and education for — and by — Haitian midwives.

Along with the professional association of Haitian Nurse Midwives (the Association Des Infirmières Sages-Femmes D’Haiti, or AISFH) and UNFPA Haiti, FAHM organizes conferences and opportunities for midwives throughout Haiti, with the aim of advancing awareness and regulation of the field and uplifting their professional status.

Our grant funding supports general operations for FAHM to do this work.

After a safe delivery at the Cabestor Birth Center in Haiti, mom, Marcenat Dady and her new son, Clyde, are visited at home by their Midwife, Michelle.
Nazdeek works at the community level to provide legal education and to empower women to mobilize when their rights have been violated.

Our grant funding supports Nazdeek’s training of paralegals. Their work enforcing the rights of women have ensured the provision of food and nutrition rations for pregnant and breastfeeding women, community toilet complexes, ambulances, and medical personnel.

PARTNER Since 2014

2017 GRANT SUPPORT $50,000 | 2017-2018

An estimated 64,000 women die from pregnancy and childbirth related causes each year in India. Low-income and tribal women face systemic barriers when accessing the essential services that they need most.

Due to a lack of Accredited Social Health Activists (ASHAs), Nazdeek’s paralegals discovered that pregnant women in Delhi were being denied key rights. In response, they engaged in months of monitoring, reporting and complaint filing. As a result of this work, the Delhi government deployed two ASHAs to the colony. Now, pregnant women and their newborns are receiving essential health services and entitlements such as nutrition and sanitation services.
In rural Tanzania, 84% of women who gave birth at home intended to deliver at a health facility, but were unable to due to distance and lack of transportation.

We Care Solar’s “Solar Suitcase” is a low-cost technology that uses the sun’s energy to provide reliable electricity, and includes lights for nighttime deliveries, outlets for charging medical devices and mobile phones, and a fetal doppler.

Our grant funding supports the installation of SolarSuitcases in 100 health centers in the Mara and Kagera districts.

2017 GRANT SUPPORT $130,000 | 2017-2018

Maasai Women Development Organization (MWEDO) helps Maasai women access education, health and economic opportunities. Maasai people, one of the most marginalized regions in Tanzania, often having little access to healthcare.

MWEDO runs a community health program, girls’ schools and Fair Trade center. They are also building a new community maternity clinic.

Our grant funding supports this new community maternity clinic that will provide quality primary, maternal and pediatric health care. We also provide funding for pregnancy, delivery and postpartum care, and healthcare worker training.

PARTNER Since 2017
2017 GRANT SUPPORT $102,000 | 2017-2018
The average distance to reach emergency hospital care in rural Uganda is over 10 miles. Many women give birth without skilled care because they are unable to access transportation to a clinic or hospital.

Baylor College of Medicine Children’s Foundation Uganda provides transportation and enables Ugandans to save for other important health expenses.

In 2017, our support ensured nearly 14,000 women and babies received care through transport vouchers for motorcycle taxis to reach health facilities, contributing to the Saving Mothers, Giving Life partnership in Uganda.

KABAROLE, KAMWENGE, AND KYENJOJO DISTRICTS, UGANDA

In 2018, Every Mother Counts will be supporting Baylor Uganda to transition from a transport voucher program in three districts to a more sustainable Village Savings & Loan model that will help communities plan for transport and other health costs. To get them started, motorcycles are provided to each village, along with education on the model.

Resta, a mother of three, lives in Kabingo Village, about 6 miles from the nearest health center. She experienced dangerous complications with her previous two births. When Resta went into labor in the middle of the night, Joseph Bagnoza, one of the riders, transported her immediately to the hospital where she was able to deliver her baby safely.

The voucher program enabled Kobusinge Resta to reach medical services throughout her pregnancy and childbirth.

Thank you
Our vision is a world where every woman has the opportunity to enter motherhood and not only survive, but thrive.

We are realizing this vision by engaging communities, thought leaders and a broad range of partners to improve access to quality, respectful and equitable maternity care for all.

Looking forward, our priorities for 2018, include deepening relationships with all of our partners and community members, while expanding initiatives to create policy and system change across a range of maternal health issues. Education, engagement and grantmaking remain central to what we do, and this year we plan to further develop this component of our work by building capacity on our team to support more advocacy efforts.

We are proud of what has been achieved so far and are excited about the opportunities to work together with each of you to continue to make strides forward. The need for change is as great as ever, as we continue to challenge ourselves with the question, what does impact look like in 2018 and beyond?

Thank you for your attention and continued support.

- Founder and CEO.
